Description

Tinka Bechert's recent, largely abstract paintings reflect on transformative processes, bodily perceptions and organic forms. An abstract gesture might suddenly turn into an arm; the spontaneity of free-form spray-paint is juxtaposed, even undermined by a controlling grid.

Patterns weave in and out of gesture, abstract fields and sometimes remnants of figuration. The artists intermittent juggling of collage-, print media and painterly elements of varying tempos and rhythms underscores a deeply inquisitive engagement with painting; a complex, dynamic and forward-looking concern.
